
Your neighbor, Mr. Heckles, wants to buy flowers for his wife, but he is too old to visit the shop himself. He asked you to bring her some from the quaint old flower shop around the corner for Valentine's Day. You invited your friends to come along because you know that the naughty shop owner, Mr. Dilbert, loves to play tricks on his visitors.

When you enter the shop, it looks unusually quiet, with no one in sight. Bouquets of beautiful flowers are neatly arranged on the shelves. You begin looking through them when suddenly the door slams shut, and you hear Mr. Dilbert's voice echo through the shop:

"Do you think buying flowers from my shop is that easy? Solve all the clues and puzzles, and only then can you take the flowers home!"

You exchange knowing looks with your friends, knowing something like this might happen. Taking a deep breath, you start scanning the room for the first clue.
